What is Art

New Mexican art is diverse, just like the people who live here. Art made in New Mexico can reflect centuries-old art making traditions as well as contemporary ideas, materials, and styles. In this lesson, students will be introduced to many different types of art made in New Mexico and broaden their perspective of what art can be.

Trade and Transportation

New Mexico has been a crossroads of trade and travel from ancient to contemporary times. People living in New Mexico throughout the centuries have forged routes and built relationships to get the items they needed and valued. This lesson explores the trade routes, forms of transportation and goods that have changed Albuquerque over time.

Faces of New Mexico

New Mexico has people from many different cultural backgrounds and walks of life. Some of these people become the subject of portraits created by artists. In this lesson, students will examine how portraits portray the diversity of people and animals in New Mexico.

Albuquerque Then and Now

Look around Albuquerque today and you can see evidence of changes made over time as well as ways we have incorporated our past. This lesson takes us on a journey from early Native American settlements to current developments in space travel to examine what has changed and what has remained the same over time.

aM Photo Archives' Educational Video Series Playlist

A short, five-video series that will introduce you to the Albuquerque Museum's photo archive and provide some pointers on visual literacy. We discuss how to read a photograph, how to do research in libraries and archives (primary vs. secondary sources), and how to combine your visual literacy and research skills into storytelling through archival collections. These are not meant to be comprehensive lessons, but a starting point to dive deeper into visual literacy and archival collections.
