Planning in the National News

From Gentrification to Decline: How Neighborhoods Really Change, published by CityLab on April 10th

When people talk about how big cities have changed over the last two decades, the word that inevitably comes up is gentrification—the influx of affluent newcomers. A transformative wave of wealth—often accompanied by displacement of lower-income neighborhood residents—has seized prominent parts of Washington, D.C., New York City, and San Francisco. But across U.S. metros, gentrification may not be the dominant type of urban change. Instead, it’s the concentration of poverty—particularly in the suburbs—that’s the type of transformation most Americans have been experiencing.

Barcelona’s superblocks are a new model for “post-car” urban living, published by Vox on April 11th

This is part four in a five-part series about the comprehensive urban plan being implemented in Barcelona, Spain, which would reclaim more than half the streets now devoted to cars for mixed-use public spaces, or “superblocks.”

Why granny flats are the housing solution everyone can love, published by The Week on April 26th

In my own neighborhood, ADUs were legalized less than a year ago. A very limited pilot program permitted construction of granny flats, carriage houses, mother-in-law apartments, and the like in a few areas of St. Paul starting in 2016 (some older properties were previously grandfathered in), but legalization only went citywide this past October. “I’ve heard from many of my constituents who are really excited about the opportunity ... for affordable housing, to create additional density, and providing housing for seniors to age in place,” said one city council member who supported the new ordinance.

Integrated Development Ordinance Updates

The Planning Department has begun the process for the first Annual Update of the Integrated Development Ordinance (IDO). The IDO requires that the City submit a packet of amendments to the Environmental Planning Commission (EPC) for consideration on an annual basis. The intent of requiring an annual update to the document is to ensure that the City's zoning regulations are always up-to-date and responsive to changing conditions in the community in addition to providing a predictable process for making changes to the document.

Upcoming IDO Meetings

The Planning Department will be holding Public Meetings to present, review, and take feedback on the proposed IDO amendments. The public meetings will be held by "Part" of the IDO, as follows:

Part 1 | General Provisions & Part 7 Definitions

Tuesday, May 28, 5:30pm – 7:30pm
Wednesday, May 29, 5:30 – 7:30 p.m.
Thursday, May 30, 11:30pm – 1:30 pm
Friday, May 31, 11:30am – 1:30pm

The IDO requires that this packet of amendments be considered by the EPC in September of every year (detailed timeline below). The Planning Department has been collecting comments and requests from the public and City staff on how the document can be improved. It's important to note that the Planning Department's recommended changes this year will only encompass technical items that address omissions, clarify, clean up, and otherwise propose language to make for a clearer, more consistent document. Individual City Councilors will have the opportunity to propose substantive changes to the document during this process. The Planning Department will put forth substantive changes to the document in future annual updates to the IDO after the Community Planning Area Assessment process has begun.
