

TRANSITION Albuquerque

from oil dependency to local resilience

Training for Transition Friday-Saturday April 10-11 2015

Learn ways of creating a positive vision for Albuquerque.

Receive tools for community outreach and engagement.

Explore obstacles that prevent our city, county, state from recognizing and positively responding to the challenge of energy transition.

Start projects in your neighborhoods like community gardens; tool sharing; barter, local businesses, chickens, water collection, recycling, public transportation, emergency response in Albuquerque.

Connect with other individuals, congregations, and organizations in New Mexico, and in the US, who are taking their future in their own hands.

Create a plan to reduce dependence on oil and create a sustainable Albuquerque—clean water, local food, great climate for future, public transportation, jobs, education.

Become a part of a rapidly growing, positive, inspirational, global movement!

Who: Join us, futurists, earth stewards, community leaders already in action, public officials, students, activists, people who want to live a conscious, sustainable lifestyle in Albuquerque.
