(right) Engine 7 Lt. Sara Ranney on Thursday August 23rd, 2018 in Chicago Illinois. This was in one of the Chicago newspapers. From Sara ; "My mother is a Chicago Parks expert/historian/advocate. My dad worked for decades on civic projects to improve the social and economic conditions on the South Side (civil rights etc). Last Thursday the Obama Foundation contacted me to see if I could get my mother to a small meeting presenting the Obama Presidential Center plans, in hopes she'll endorse it and help quell opposition to putting it in one of the historic parks.. I said I would, but including Dad, due to his role in the South Side in the past. The design meeting was fantastic. In a larger meeting, not only did Obama publicly recognize my father but he (as planned but not promised) greeted him/us. This was after he watched me whisking Parkinson's-drool off Dad's mouth every 30 seconds or so. I got a handshake and a kiss on the cheek. No clue what your politics are, but politics aren't the point. This was a huge lift for all of us. I feel validated for all my commitment and efforts to get Dad back into life. In a beautiful way, 'there's nothing more left that needs to be done' because my dad now has such peace around what he spent his life working on.
